Walt Disney World Resort World History Digest

MILESTONES

Early 1960s

After Disneyland opens in 1955, Walt Disney is approached many times to build another park. Offers of free land come from inside and outside the United States. Disney begins developing attractions for the 1964 New York World's Fair: General Electric's "Carousel of Progress," Ford's Magic Skyway," Pepsi-Cola's "It's a Small World" and the state of Illinois' "Great Moments with Mr. Lincoln." Walt is absorbed with the technological achievements of his Imagineers and considers ways to expand.

1963-65
A team assigned by Walt begins searching for a location where he can build his dream park. When Walt flies over the initial 20,000-acre Central Florida site with its pristine wetlands and forests, his mind is made up. Secret purchases of the acreage and adjoining property continue for more than a year with the average price per acre at $185. In the end, the Disney company paid about $5 million for 27,000 acres (about 43 square miles) in Orange and Osceola counties ("Walt Disney, An American Original" by Bob Thomas, 1976, Pocket Books, a division of Simon & Schuster, Inc.)

November 15, 1965
Walt and his fiscally astute brother, Roy O. Disney, announce the Florida Project at an Orlando press conference with Florida Gov. Hayden Burns. "Believe me, it's the most exciting and challenging assignment we have ever tackled at Walt Disney Productions," Walt said. ("The Quotable Walt Disney," compiled by Dave Smith, Archivist, 2001 Disney Enterprises, Inc.) Walt says the project, estimated at $100 million, will comprise a Disneyland-type entertainment park, recreation areas and two cities – one traditional and one futuristic.

1966
Ideas based on Walt's dream crystallize as Imagineers prepare plans for EPCOT – an Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow designed as a showplace for technologies of the world. State legislation creates municipalities of Lake Buena Vista and Bay Lake and the Reedy Creek Improvement District, which allow Disney to pay for major services without depending on its Central Florida neighbors. Walt dies in December 1966 before construction starts.

Fall 1967
Site preparation begins

Spring 1969
Construction is underway on Magic Kingdom, the Polynesian and Contemporary resorts. More than 50 miles of water-control channels are built to wind through the natural landscape, and more than 8,000 acres are set aside as a permanent conservation area. The resort builds its own energy plants, maintenance shops, food and laundry centers.

Early 1970
It takes 18 months to complete Cinderella Castle and 9,000-plus workers at a cost of more than $400 million to finish the iconic Magic Kingdom park, Seven Seas Lagoon, Palm and Magnolia golf courses and the first two resort hotels.

Campbell, Buddy Hackett and Jonathan Winters. Boston Pops maestro Arthur Fiedler conducts the 60-nation World Symphony Orchestra concert. Roy O. Disney, reads the dedication plaque: Walt Disney World is a tribute to the philosophy and life of Walter Elias Disney . . . and to the talents, the dedication and the loyalty of the entire Disney organization that made Walt Disney's dream come true. May Walt Disney World bring Joy and Inspiration and New Knowledge to all who come to this happy place . . . a Magic Kingdom where the young at heart of all ages can laugh and play and learn – together. The plaque rests below the Town Square flagpole on Main Street, U.S.A.
